

Matthew Moorhead Bio

Matthew Moorhead is the Acting Head of the Office of Civil and Criminal Justice Reform at the Commonwealth Secretariat in London. At the Secretariat he works on a range of law reform projects aimed at strengthening legal frameworks, including international commercial arbitration. He is interested in law as a tool for development. Before joining the Commonwealth Secretariat he was a counsel at the World Bank in Washington, DC, and worked on investment projects in Asia and the Pacific. He was a judicial associate to a justice of the High Court of Australia. He has law degrees from the Australian National University and New York University.